Short Description

Chinese early 18th century blue and white porcelain rosewater sprinkler. Made during the Emperor Kangxi's reign 1662-1722.

Excellent painting and colour to show Taoist emblems associated with the scholar. The smaller than usual size of this sprinkler would suggest that it was for the Scholars Table.

the potting is very good as many sprinklers can be slightly off potted.

A small hatched border separates the bottom from the next section and small flower sprays are at the base of the neck
